FREQ NASTY

SHORT BIO

Born in Fiji, raised in New Zealand, and formed musically in the dance music revolution of London in the late ‘90s and early Y2Ks, FreQ Nasty started his career on the seminal UK Breaks & Bass label Botchit & Scarper, where he released the classic breaks album ‘FreQs Geeks and Mutilations’ in 1999 and his first international hit ‘Boomin’ Back Atcha’featuring UK Hip Hop MC and MOBO award winner Phoebe One. Soon after its release, he signed to SKINT/Sony Records alongside Fatboy Slim, Dave Clarke, and X-Press 2. Over the coming years, he went on to release a slew of cutting-edge Breaks and Breakbeat Garage records, collaborating with &/or remixing Fatboy Slim, Kelis, Santigold, Bassnectar, KRS One, Roots Manuva, Rodney P, and Reggae legend Junior Delgado and becoming a fixture of the global Electronic Music scene. 2008 saw the release of both 'Creator', a collab with MIA producer Switch and Brooklyn vocalist Santigold that launched Santigold's career, and soon after, he unveiled his FABRICLIVE 42 mix CD (DJ Mag's' compilation of the month'), released on legendary London nightclub Fabric's label. FreQ held a multi-year DJ residency at Fabric whilst also becoming one of Burning Man festival's most loved DJs, and his signature Bass-heavy sets have been a pilgrimage for fans of the legendary Nevada desert festival for years.

The 2010s saw FreQ focusing his energies on meditation and Yoga, becoming a trained teacher in both the Theravada Buddhist and Tibetan Buddhist traditions, as well as studying Yoga philosophy. This led to the creation of a series of workshops focused on the intersection of music and meditation, which he presented at festivals, studios, and events globally. By the early 2010s, FreQ was back in the studio and released the 'Low Frequency Pureland EP' (DJ Mag 'MoneyShot' 10/10), and #loveistheonlyanswer' single (2020) on Muti Music, and joined the SubPac tactile music start-up, helping to create new ways to use the sense of touch to perceive music. In 2018, he launched a scientific exploration of music as a healing modality, founding a music-based medtech startup with Stanford Neuroscientist Dr. Gary Heit that was awarded a government medical grant to explore the emerging field. At the same time, his music appeared on Mark Ronson's 'Watch The Sound?' (Apple TV, 2021), Taika Waititi produced 'Reservoir Dogs'(Hulu, 2021), 'Self Made: Madam CJ Walker' (Netflix, 2020), and Warner Bros' 'Black Lightning' (2019), amongst others. The early to mid-2020s have seen FreQ put his energy back into the studio and his label, 'Between the Silence', releasing a variety of left-field bass music, breaks, and garage that has been supported by newer DJs luminaries such as @Fish56octagon, Sicaria, Mary Droppinz, as well as OG producer legends like Noisia, MJ Cole, and BT.

DJ OFFERINGS:

- FreQ Nasty DJ set: Future-forward sounds from the fringes of bass-heavy electronic music, including new breaks, garage, broken beat, as well as multitempo bass music from the current scene + new FreQ productions
- Classic Nu Skool Breaks DJ set: bringing late 1998-2005 era breaks classics, inc. unreleased FreQ material from that golden period of breaks.

WORKSHOP OFFERINGS:

- Music and Meditation Workshop: An exploration of the parallels between the peak music experience on the dancefloor and the peak states of the meditative spiritual traditions. Using his experience as a DJ and meditation teacher, FreQ will explore ancient texts and neuroscience to provide attendees with useful tools for everyday life.
- Flight Mode Sessions: Based on Buddhist mindfulness techniques, current neuroscience, and the latest flow state techniques, the Flight Mode Sessions are an IRL, device-free, intentional community gathering designed to help effectively manage an increasingly digital world filled with anxiety and overwhelm.

REVIEWS:

- Fabric Live 42: Fabric Records - mixed by FreQ Nasty
  "Breaks Pioneer FreQ Nasty mixes one of the world's most respected mix series. "It's a testament to FreQ Nasty that there can be such ample use of 'down-time' " -
  Review by PopMatters
- Y4K DJ Mix Album: Distinct'ive Breaks Records - mixed by FreQ Nasty
  "Mixed beautifully with a really vibrant track selection, FreQ demonstrates why he is such a crowd favorite."
  Review by Resident Advisor